THE FIVE ELEMENTS OF NATURE

Being Indians, we all know that the five elements of nature namely fire (agni), earth (prithvi), air (vayu), water (jal) and ether (akash), also known as 'PANCH MAHA BHUTUS', form the very basis of everything that exists on earth. Let us try and understand how these elements relate to architecture, especially interior spaces, which is going to be the focus of this. Spaces that intentionally embody or emphasize these elements as part of their design vocabulary somehow always appeal to each one of us. At elementary level human body is also composed of these five elements- fire, earth, air, water, ether. We need a constant connection to these basic units of our existence to feel at ease, rooted and peaceful.

EARTH | पृथ्वी

Prithvi, the Guardian of Earth, embodied solidity and endurance. She shaped mountains, forests, and fertile lands, providing the world with a strong foundation.

Inspired by her essence, laminates with marble textures, stone finishes, and earthy tones were created. These designs brought a sense of warmth, stability, and connection to nature into homes and workspaces.
